"Even in a city especially blessed by a great number and variety of singing ensembles, the Chorale has an enviable reputation among nonprofessional choruses for its high-quality performances, imaginative programming, commitment to the commissioning of new works, and its vision for the future."

The Back Bay Chorale

The Back Bay Chorale is a 100-member auditioned chorus drawing singers from the greater Boston area.

From its inception, the BBC has made a commitment to share music in the community with repertoire that ranges from Renaissance to contemporary. Musician, minister, and social activist Larry Hill founded the BBC in 1973 at Boston's Church of the Covenant to create a musical ministry that would bring meaning to both singers and their audience. In the years since Hill's death in 1989, the Chorale has continued to grow in stature and is now regarded as one of Boston's premier nonprofessional choruses.

We believe that music should not be limited to those who can visit the concert hall. Our Bridges program, launched in 2013, is an integral part of the Back Bay Chorale's mission to celebrate and share the unifying power of music with our community.

In partnership with the Boston Public Library, our Bridges ESL Singing Group provides participants with an opportunity to make vocal music, improve their English language skills, and develop friendships with singers—within the ESL community as well as with singers from Back Bay Chorale.

“It seems a mis-characterization to call the Back Bay Chorale an amateur ensemble, yet to ignore this fact detracts from its considerable accomplishment. Regardless of its status, the high caliber of musicianship evident... speaks to the impressive ambition and devotion to music fostered by the institution.”
